
Luganville Tourism Trials out Cruise Terminal with the Arrival of the Pacific Jewel on the 1st of June 2018.

Today marked the first use of the new Luganville cruise terminal for the arrival of the Pacific Jewel cruise liner. It also saw the official opening of the NBV currency exchange boot, launce by the honourable Lord Mayor of Luganville Municipality with the NBV manager from the northern branch, and was witness by the head of other government departments in Sanma province.

As the passengers disembarked the boat for the morning, the queue flow well with the customs and biosecurity officers check in counters

Inside the cruise terminal, the Santo Travel Centre introduce the voucher system for the independent passengers with 11 different travel packages and the visitors were escorted to the waiting transport operators to deliver the service ensuring more visitor confidence

There was a lot of great feedback from the cruise customers when they came back from their respective tours.

The handicraft @ the wharf introduce for the first time ONLY Vanuatu made local products which was quiet exciting for the mama's and also gave them motivation to produce more which also encourage creativity. There were also few handicraft stalls set up at the Unity Park, which also sells for Chinese products.

Since the opening of the new Luganville cruise terminal, it is the first time this was fully utilize with all these services provided, and despite the fact that there were some challenges encountered, the Luganville cruise team had taken as a lesson learned for improvements before the next cruise ship in November. In all, it was a great day for the service providers and the visitors as well and everyone was happy with the outcome.
